MARKER UNVEILED—Struggling against brisk beachfront winds Sunday morning to unveil an historic marker at the foot of Ulman Avenue in Bay St. Louis are City Councilman Lisa Cowan and Mayor Victor Frankiewicz, both at left. Also participating in the ceremonies are Dr. William Bradford of Waveland, president of Hancock County Historical Society, and City Councilman Jim Thriffiley, right. The marker commemorates an 1814 naval battle near the entrance to the Bay of St. Louis which was the last time the U.S. Navy was required to defend the continental shores of the United States against a foreign invader. Cannon salutes were included in the ceremony in honor of the six Americans who died in the battle which allowed Gen. Andrew Jackson time to set up defenses in Chalmette, La. where he defeated the British in the Battle of New Orleans. (Photo by Larry Timmerman)

County Library expansion OK'd

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Library System has received a grant for expansion of its main building, the City-County Library on US-90.

According to Library Board of Trustees Chairperson Betty Claggett, the grant consists of $77,000 in federal matching funds.

The matching funds include $34,341 specifically budgeted for that purpose by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, $9,000 from the City of Bay St. Louis, $6,311 from City of Waveland, and $2,300 Claggett said had been donated by an anonymous source.

Kathryn Merkle, assistant director of library development for the State Library Commission in Jackson, explained to the board of supervisors Monday that the terms of the grant state that the library building, once enlarged and renovated, must remain in use as a library for the next 20 years.

She asked the board to sign a letter of agreement accepting the grant and to comply with current regulations for federal grant funds.

The funds are Title II construction monies being obtained through the U.S. Department of Education under its Library Services and Construction Act program.

Prima Wuznack, director of the Hancock County Library System and secretary to the board of trustees, asked the supervisors to approve a resolution that will provide all documents needed for final approval of the project.

She also asked the supervisors to approve hiring Fred Wagner as the architect for the project.

Wagner was the original architect for the existing building and has already submitted a preliminary plan for a renovation and expansion project.

The architect told the supervisors that he is not sure the roof of the building, which has caused some leakage problems in the past, would be included in the grant project.

He said Merkle is helping the library board with interpretation of the grant regulations now and whether the roof can be included or not depends on how much funding must be used for actual construction and how much can be used for renovations.

He also said he does not know how much of the money can be used for external renovations, such as repainting the building.

Claggett said much of the money will be spent on enlarging the building itself, but the grant project will include purchase and installation of computer equipment.

The supervisors agreed to hire Wagner as well as to participate in the project.

Also on Monday, the supervisors:

—Agreed to amend a contract with King Construction of Ocean Springs for renovation of the Hancock County Fairgrounds by $4,136 to include additional electrical work;

—Amended the road and bridge budget to show $130,000 in carryover funds and the bridge construction budget to show $60,000 in carryover funds;

—Approved hiring a 10-hour per day guard at Bayou Cadet through an extension of a Gulf Coast Security contract with the Port and Harbor Commission;

—Reappointed Paul Smith to Gulf Coast Mosquito Control Commission;

—Gave Assessor-Tax Collector Edward Murtagh permission to develop a detailed map of the county for use during the implementation of an enhanced 911 emergency telephone system;

—Issued a proclamation designating Dec. 14 as the 175th anniversary of the founding of Hancock County;

—Set a weight limit restricting Mill Creek Bridge in Beat Three and Catatoula Bridge in Beat Two to light traffic only, due to problems with pilings;

—Set a meeting with U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Representative Bob Martin for Jan. 15, when Martin is expected to provide the board with a report on the status of a two-year shore protection study currently underway;

—Agreed to close all county offices Dec. 24 and 25 for Christmas holidays.

The board meets again at 9 a.m. Dec. 29.

Building finished for new Stennis Airpark industry

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

Thermal Associates is expected to move in new quarters at Stennis International Airpark next week.

The high tech industry has been operating for several months in the airpark in temporary facilities while a new 10,000 square foot building was under construction.

Engineer Richard Murley of Cortech, Inc. reported to the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission Monday the anticipated completion date of Dec. 19 should be met.

"We were very lucky in the beginning of construction that when we needed it there was good weather," he said.

Only a few punch list items will need to be completed following Friday and these can be finished after Thermal Associates is located in the building, Murley said.

"Thermal Associates is the first high tech industry to locate at Stennis but this is only the beginning and we have learned a lot in assisting this type of industry to locate in the area," said Harold Olsen, Port and Harbor Commission director.

The high tech industry has special needs and the Port and Harbor Commission is now better prepared to meet these needs in helping this type of industry locate here.

An example of the special needs is the disposable waste generated in high tech industries, he said.

"Currently there is no dump for this waste in Mississippi and it must be transported to Alabama or Louisiana for disposal," Olsen added.

Olsen said special arrangements must also be made for the sewerage treatment process because of the use of heavy metals in production.

"We are real excited about getting Thermal Associates in the new building because they son will have 30 employees and most of these are from Hancock County," he added.

"We only began talking with Thermal Associates in early summer and they will be moving into the building next week and are already talking about expansion," Olsen said.

Richard Kiley, owner and president of Thermal Associates, said the new location for the industry which moved from Massachusetts is working out very well.

"We are very happy with the support from the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission," Kiley said.

He also commented on the "good quality, hard-working people" who are currently employed with the company.

Full payment required for timber illegally cut off 16th Section land

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Hancock County School Board voted Tuesday to require full payment from a lease holder for timber cut on Sixteenth Section land.

Board Attorney Joseph Gex told the board they were entitled to charge as much as three times the value of the timber cut and cancel the lease.

According to Superintendent Terrell Randolph the there was only a small amount of timber cut on the land and the full amount received for the timber had already been turned over to the school district.

Randolph said he talked with the Mississippi Forestry Commission which had investigated the matter and determined there is no other damage to the property other than the trees which were cut.

"Cutting timber on Sixteenth Section land or lieu lands is a violation of a lease and is usually included in the lease-contract," Randolph said.

But this particular lease was several years old and did not include information currently placed in Sixteenth Section leases regarding cutting timber on the property, he added.

"However any future illegal timber cutting will probably result in assessing three times the value of the timber cut and the possibility of cancellation of the lease," Randolph said.

The board voted to require only the amount of timber sold from the property in this case but instructed Gex to write a letter to the leaseholder outlining the law regarding cutting timber on Sixteenth Section lands and lieu lands.

Also to be included in the letter is a warning that should this happen again the lease would be cancelled.

Also at the meeting the board conducted hearings during an executive session for several students involved in disciplinary action.

In other business the board: —Approved a recommendation to employ Ray Williams as bus driver for school bus, Route 15.

—Approved a recommendation to employ Wayne Bosarge, Bonnie Taylor, Wayne Deschamps and James Bennett as substitute bus drivers.

—Approved the out of state field trip for 136 Gulfview School students who attended football game at Superdome in New Orleans, La. on Saturday, Dec. 12.

—Approved the sale of used school buses no longer needed in transportation department.

Park improvements continue in Bay

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

Work continues in the Bay St. Louis city parks as the Parks and Playgrounds Commission utilizes grant money to fund various improvements.

The commission Monday approved bids by Mary Garland for corrosion treatment and painting of existing playground equipment.

In city owned parks near city hall on Washington Street and on Seventh Street, new playground equipment is scheduled to be installed following minimum ground work.

In addition to new playground equipment, lights, new tennis court surface and new basketball court surfaces have been installed in city parks.

Commission President George Proulx says the grant project which including matching funds from the Parks and Playgrounds is providing for total park improvement of city-owned parks and the commission is utilizing other funds for improvements in parks not owned by the city.

He also said installation of the Seventh Street Park playground equipment will be delayed until a survey can be completed to deter-challenged opponents to a series of debates.

Mitchell, mayor of Long Beach for the past seven years, is running for the congressional seat being vacated by Rep. Trent Lott who is running for the U.S. Senate. Besides Mitchell, several other candidates have entered the March 8 primaries for Lott's congressional seat, including State Senator Gene Taylor of Bay St. Louis.

"We can spend a lot of money on pretty television commercials that give the voters the messages that we want them to have," Mitchell said. "But that's not fair. It is important that we have open forums so that the voters can truly know the differences between the candidates."

He pledges to contact the other candidates about having these forums where the candidates pay for equal shares of time for live debates to be televised on WLOX in Biloxi and WDAM in Hattiesburg.

This would allow the voters to be informed before the primaries.

Mitchell said that the most important issue in the race is jobs and economic development.

"This is not the time to throw up our hands in anguish and give up like some other states have done," he said. "I am the one candidate in this race who has had hand-on experience and success in bringing jobs and promoting economic development for my area."

Mitchell said as mayor he has been responsible for the city's $4.3 million budget and providing essential services to an area that has tripled its population during his tenure.

"I know how to cut through the red tape of the state and federal bureaucracies to get what we need for our people," he said. "Again, that takes hard work, plain old bull-headed stubbornness and an innovative approach to solving our problems."

The candidate said where the state and federal governments cut back support to the elderly, he pushed the city to develop an innovative approach for helping its senior citizens lead productive, dignified lives.

"Another reason that I'm running for Congress is that I want to build seniority, and power, for our district in Washington," he said. "Both Congressman Lott and Sen. John Stennis rose to positions of power and influence, through the seniority system. I have the stamina and vitality to earn a leadership role for South Mississippi in Washington."

Mitchell said that an important part of his campaign platform is traditional family values.

"My wife, Trudy, and I are natives of the district and preserve these values through our children and through our involvement in our community and our church," Mitchell said. "It's easy to say that you believe in traditional family values—it's another to teach and live by those values."

STATE'S WEATHER TEMPERAMENTAL

Mississippi's temperamental weather gets the attention of both town and country people from time to time, but the switch this month from warm, droughty conditions to sudden freezing temperatures at night, tornados, torrential rainstorms and flooding provided a classic example of this state's weather extremes that lead many local folks to advise that if you don't like the weather here, just wait a little while and it will change.

What happened Saturday through Monday, Nov. 14-16, underscored the Mississippi weather reputation in one of the most diverse manners that this writer ever has witnessed.

In central Mississippi, about 20 miles northwest of Jackson, Saturday, Nov. 14, started off fine under sunny skies with a gentle southerly breeze. Yet a guarded weather forecast warned that rain was on the way to end the two-month drought.

I was working on my farm and perspiring lightly as my wife drove up to the fence where I was digging a post hole to tell me that she had just noticed a dense smoke arising north of our place. In the dry, tinderbox situation which had been creating daily forest fires those words were the last ones I needed to hear: We got in my pick-up and drove northward to see what was going on. We learned quickly that my neighbor had been on his tractor bush-hogging tall and thick dry weeds and sedgebrush.

Lint and dust had clogged his radiator screen and the tractor motor had overheated. While he was cleaning radiator vents the tractor backfired and caught the grass and weeds afire. The breeze fanned it and as it spread my neighbor fled for assistance leaving the tractor at the mercy of the fire.

Shortly two firetrucks and other emergency vehicles and autos and pick-ups bringing volunteer fire fighters arrived at the scene amid sirens and flashing red lights. The trucks drove immediately across the dry, flat terrain to the rapidly spreading fire lines.

Volunteer firemen from the nearby Pocahontas station donned protective clothing, reeled out hoses, and some took flaps as they attacked the perimeter of the fire with fire nozzles and flaps. Soon they had converted flames to smoke and then concentrated their efforts on wetting down hot spots. Then they left.

By mid-afternoon however a car wheeled into my place to tell me that the fire was going again and had burned an abandoned house and jumped the road. I scouted the new situation in my truck and was alarmed to find no break in the tall weeds and grass to prevent its spread all along the north line of my farm. Inside my farm fence lines I had spent many hours mowing fire lanes just in case a wildfire came along from adjoining properties. Fortunately for me the wind was out of the South.

I telephoned the emergency number and reported the renewed emergency situation. Soon the two fire trucks were back on the scene, followed by a county-owned tank truck full of water for refilling the pumps. As they extinguished the new fire perimeter with water a fireman raced down the road in his car to a soybean field and asked the operators to bring their tractors and disks to help stop the fire. The two tractors followed him down the road, stopped briefly to talk with firemen, and then began cutting weeds and grass and turning up a wide band of fresh earth in a large containment of the fire strategy. Shortly it was under control and thoroughly extinguished. The men who had accomplished the mission were all volunteers who had responded on a Saturday afternoon to do a job of considerable difficulty and a major public service.

The next day, Sunday, the wind blew hard all day and through he night, ushering in the next weather front that brought an ironic new threat and damages to many state areas on Monday.

At my place 7½ inches of rain fell in a deluge Monday afternoon. Ponds, nearly empty from drought, suddenly were filled. Nearby a recently built pond was instantly filled by the first rain to occur since it was built.

As a farm reporter I had left the Mississippi Farm Bureau building in Jackson to observe what was going on in the country when the storms hit.

These are some of the incidents of Mississippi's weather situation last week that didn't make the prime news or front page reports. But they happened, and others like them, with much trauma to many rural families along the backroads of the state as the state's weather lived up to its temperamental weather reputation once again.

Joyful noises are heard as Mississippi ETV presents seven very special Christmas musical presentations just in time to light up the yuletide season.

The seasonal singing and music begins at 9 p.m., Friday, Dec. 18, as 'Great Performances' presents 'Christmas with Flicka,' an hour-long special set against the Austrian Alps and starring mezzo-soprano Frederica von Stade, known to her friends as 'Flicka,' and Melba Moore.

Conductor John Williams and the Boston Pops are joined by the Vienna Choir Boys and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus for an hour-long 'Evening at Pops,' filled with music and an old-fashioned Christmas pageant. The special airs at 9 p.m., Monday, Dec. 21.

Acclaimed tenor Luciano Pavarotti performs his own renditions of Christmas classics including 'Ave Maria' from the Church of Notre Dame in Montreal in 'A Christmas Special with Luciano Pavarotti' at 10 p.m., Monday, Dec. 21.

Robert Shaw conducts the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and chorus when Handel's joyous Christmas score airs in 'Handel's Messiah with Robert Shaw and the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra' at 8 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

mine the exact property lines and installation of a fence on the side and back property lines is planned.

Also Monday, the commission approved a $4,800 payment to Terry Feeney for installation of a concrete slab at the Washington Street Park and a $8,948 payment to American Tennis Courts for City Park improvements including the resurfacing of the tennis court and installation of lines on the Washington Street Park tennis court.

Proulx said in spite of requests for additional funding for both these projects from the contractor, the bid amounts is all that is being paid.

According to Proulx, Feeney had requested additional funds because the new concrete slab was considerably larger than the one he had replaced and American Tennis Courts had bid on the project but had lost the last page of the bid packet which included the cost for relining the Washington Street Park.

"We are using grant funds for this project and are subject to severe scrutiny and are not able to pay the additional amounts requested although both errors occurred by mistake," Proulx said.

IRS trying to return $284,094 to Mississippi Taxpayers

The IRS is trying to give $284,094 back to Mississippians who paid too much in Federal income taxes! The post office has sent the 628 checks back to the IRS marked "undeliverable!" The average amount of checks now waiting at the IRS for their owners is $452.38.

"The refunds range from a dollar to a whopping $7,960.00," said Tully Miller, Jackson District director of the IRS.

"I'll tell you this," Miller quipped, "If I had over $400 coming back to me from Uncle Sam, and especially if I was waiting for $4,000 to $7,000, I'd surely let the IRS know my correct mailing address!"

They are mailed to the address the taxpayer puts on the return, usually in four to six weeks after initial receipt at the service center. Each year, according to Miller, some checks are undeliverable for many reasons and are returned to the IRS.

"Often the address is incorrect, sometimes the taxpayer has moved without notifying the post office of a forwarding address, or maybe the forwarding order a taxpayer left at the post office has expired," Miller explained.

The taxpayer may have changed last names, or perhaps the handwriting on the tax return was illegible. "The best way to avoid misdirected refund checks is to use the peel-off label found in the tax package," said Miller.

Taxpayers who did not receive their refund checks should call the IRS on the toll-free telephone line at 1-800-424-1040 to make arrangements for the checks to be mailed to them at their correct address.

Miller said the checks must be reissued and mailed to the owners of the refunds only after the IRS has been contacted by telephone. He stressed that no checks would be available for personal pickup.

Those in this area with refunds include: Shirley Berlinda and Justin

Quotables by Cuevas

Saturday will be a good day to see politicians work—physical work, that is.

Several years ago, Senator Gene Taylor came up with the idea of holding a benefit car wash for the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund with local political leaders doing the chore.

The car wash will begin at 9 a.m. and be held at Gulf National Bank's parking lot, US-90 at Carroll Avenue in Bay St. Louis.

This will be a good time to get your car washed and see how hard our political leaders can work and make a donation to a very worthy cause.

A minimum donation of $3 will be requested. It looks like the Doll and Toy Fund will need all the help it can get this year as there are many deserving boys and girls in Hancock County.

We hope to see you at the car wash on Saturday.

We had an interesting conversation with Mrs. Patricia Matthews of Bay St. Louis this week who told us about a project she and several other residents would like to see become a reality.

As many of you know, there are some children in our community whose parents are in very tight financial positions, and their children at times do not have proper shoes or clothing even to attend school.

Mrs. Matthews is interested, along with several friends, in the formation of a Clothing Exchange, or whatever name is decided, in order to help these children.

We know from talking to teachers and aides about some children going to school without a coat, shoes, or socks.

Persons interested in the formation of such a Clothing Exchange can contact Mrs. Matthews at 467-2985.

Last Thursday Bay St. Louis resident W.A. (Fred) Curet Jr. died in Biloxi.

I had known Curet for many years as he was Hancock County's sheriff and tax collector for four years, a Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol officer, was in private security service and owned a construction service.

I had the honor and privilege several years ago of being the first person to publish a story about his horrors of World War II when he was a Japanese prisoner of war.

Curet, a Hancock County native was at a machine gun position at the entrance to the famous underground hospital on Corrigadore when he was captured and sent to Nagasaki to work in a coal mine for the duration of the war.

Curet, as a United States Marine, survived as a prisoner of war and was one of the few Americans to be able to give a first-hand report on the destruction caused by the atomic bomb dropped on Nagasaki.

Curet was proud to be an American and served his country well.

His wife, children, relatives and friends should know that W.A. (Fred) Curet will long be remembered by the people of Hancock County.

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

Jackson—most members of the incoming state Senate were buzzing around the state Capitol last week like youngsters at the foot of the Christmas tree, eagerly hoping Santa Claus will give them some bauble.

The Santa Claus in this case is Lt. Gov. Brad Dye, who under the system by which the Senate operates is the dispenser of the goodies to senators in the form of committee assignments.

Dye's role as Santa Claus seems to be even more entrenched now that he has the state Supreme Court's sanction to wield power over Senate committees as long as the Senate rules permit him to. Although the rules could be changed by the senators when they arrive Jan. 5, there's not a smidgen of a chance they are going to tamper with Dye's power.

As a matter of fact, a draft of proposed rules to be adopted Jan. 5 has been sent out to members by the outgoing Rules Committee. None of the proposed changes touch the power the lieutenant governor already has over the Senate internal organization.

A half dozen or so major committee chairmanships that have come open as a result of retirement of former occupants of the posts, or some shifts within the Senate ranks, are now at Dye's disposal.

The choicest plum is the chairmanship of the powerful Appropriations Committee, which Sen. Glen Dewese of Meridian is giving up since he will again be elected the Senate's president pro tempore. Other key chairmanships to be filled include Judiciary, Education, Public Health, Banks, Highways and Insurance.

Dye's choice for the Appropriations spot, most senators believe, will be Sen. Jack Gordon of Okolona, now the chairman of Education. While Gordon is Dye's closest lieutenant in the Senate, he is not highly regarded as a lawmaker by most of his colleagues.

Quite a number of senators privately say Gordon lacks the polish and the legislative ability to handle the Appropriations job, which is one of the most demanding and influential in the legislative process.

Some feel if Dye goes through with the Gordon appointment, it could produce a serious split in Senate ranks and possibly provide the opening wedge to eventually reform Senate rules and trim Dye's power. If seniority were followed in awarding the Appropriations chairmanship, it would go to Sen. Robert Crook of Ruleville, the longtime vice-chairman who ran the committee for over half the 1987 session while Dewese was recuperating from heart surgery.

Crook, who will be the senior member of the Senate, has not gotten along very well with Dye for several years and on some occasions has been openly critical of Dye's meddling in committee affairs.

If Dye passes over Crook for the Appropriations chairmanship and again assigns Crook to be vice-chairman, it would not be surprising to see the veteran Ruleville lawmaker balk at serving under Gordon.

Several senators who sponsored fund-raisers for Dye during his recent re-election are expected to fare pretty well when Dye hands out some of the committee plums.

Sen. Rick Lambert of Hattiesburg, who was a sponsor for a fund-raiser and also personally contributed $2500 to Dye, appears almost a certainty to get the chairmanship of Judiciary left vacant by the retirement of Sen. Martin Smith of Poplarville.

Lambert, who had moved up as vice-chairman of Judiciary last session, has been chairman of Municipalities. Regarded as one of the ablest lawyers in the Legislature, Lambert's appointment to head Judiciary would be highly approved by his colleagues.

In some quarters it is believed that Lambert may tip the Judiciary Committee more favorably toward tort reform legislation which is again going to be made a prime goal of the business and industry lobby.

Sen. Alan Heflin of Forest, who also sponsored a Dye fund-raiser, is being viewed by some of his colleagues as one of Dye's new top lieutenants and a probable recipient of some choice committee spots.

Heflin, a second-term, is reportedly interested in the chairmanship of Education, which Gordon would be vacating. However, Dye may be hard-pressed to give the Education post to Sen. Hainon Miller of Greenville, who for years a leader in education while serving in the House.

Sen. John Keeton of Grenada is being mentioned as the new chairman of Banks. But the fact that Keeton has been a director and sizable stock holder in the Grenada Sunburst Banking System, the state's fourth largest bank, is apparently raising some questions.

Also seeking the chairmanship of Banks is Sen. Robert Dearing of Natchez, who has the backing of some of Dye's big political friends. Dearing is also a contender for the chairmanship of highways, but he will be vying with Sens. Bill Canon of Columbus and Bill Harpole of Starkville, two veterans who are hotly pursuing the Highway slot.

Sen. Rob Smith of Florence is considered the insider to get the chairmanship to Public Health to succeed Sen. George Smith of Gulfport, who dropped out of the Legislature to run for county supervisor. But Dye may have a problem bypassing Sen. Cy Rosenblatt of Jackson, who is now vice-chairman of Public Health.

One of the proposed rules changes is to split the Conservation Committee into one committee to handle water conservation and the other marine conservation. Sen.-elect Clyde Woodfield of Gulfport, who is moving over from the House, may get the marine conservation job.

Thad Cochran

SOVIET/AMERICAN SUMMIT SHOULD IMPROVE RELATIONS BETWEEN TWO SUPERPOWERS

Senator Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) says the Washington summit should help improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"I think the American people basically feel good about the relationship between President Reagan and Secretary Gorbachev," the Senator said, "and we are hoping this will lead to improved relations between the superpowers in the future."

Senator Cochran said it was important that tensions be reduced between the United States and the Soviet Union and that the likelihood of a nuclear exchange be lessened.

The Senator pointed out he was in favor of negotiations to reduce the number of nuclear weapons and the dangers created by nuclear armaments around the world, and that a "verifiable arms control agreement would be in the best interests of both the Soviet Union and the United States."

In regard to the INF treaty signed by President Reagan and Secretary Gorbachev in Washington, Senator Cochran said that both nations "had to give up something" in reducing nuclear arms. The Russians are concerned, he added, because our nuclear warheads in Europe are aimed at them, and it is in their interests to abide by the treaty to reduce this threat.

Senator Cochran noted the Senate would begin consideration of the treaty in January, with the Foreign Relations Committee undertaking hearings first, then the Senate would be faced with a vote on ratification.

Bay St. Louis

Dear Editor,
I would like to thank the Fenton and Kiln volunteer firemen who responded to the fire at our garage last Sunday night.

Although the structure was hopelessly engulfed in flames when the fire was discovered and the alarm sent out, these men were somehow able to save part of the structure. The heat was very intense and there is no doubt that our home would have burned also had it not been for their efforts.

They are a credit to the community and I would once more like to thank them for their service to their neighbors.

Sincerely yours,

Almost 1/3 in Mississippi survey support AIDS quarantine

Most Mississippians know how the AIDS virus is transmitted and how to avoid contracting AIDS virus infection, but too many don't know how the virus is not transmitted.

State Epidemiologist Dr. Ed Thompson announced findings from the State Department of Health's statewide telephone survey of knowledge and attitudes about acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) and HIV (human immunodeficiency virus), the AIDS virus.

"Our educational efforts need to focus on making people aware of the lack of transmission of the AIDS virus by routes outside of sexual contact, blood-to-blood contact, and mother-to-infant/fetus transmission," Dr. Thompson said.

Through the telephone survey, conducted in September, health officials wanted to learn about Mississippians' knowledge, sources of information, opinions, and attitudes about AIDS and AIDS virus infection.

Surveyors used a probability sampling technique based on a random digit dialing method modified from Centers for Disease Control techniques.

Based on the "excellent" response rate and the "margin for error," Dr. Thompson said survey "findings can be generalized to the population of Mississippi as a whole with excellent confidence."

"And the survey indicates that Mississippians in general are well educated about the ways in which the AIDS virus is transmitted," he said.

Not surprisingly, most respondents learned about AIDS from the media: 85 percent cited television, 43 percent newspapers, 18 percent magazines, and 14 percent radio.

With the option to name one or more sources, less than 10 percent indicated they learned about AIDS from friends, co-workers, their physician, family members, brochures, or other sources.

Several survey questions dealt with levels of education. Of the respondents:

- 97 percent knew the AIDS virus could be transmitted through having sex with someone who has the AIDS virus.

- 95 percent knew the virus could be transmitted by using IV (intravenous) drugs and sharing needles.

- 92 percent knew men can give the AIDS virus to male sexual partners;

- 91 percent knew men can give the AIDS virus to female sexual partners; and

- 85 percent knew that women can give the AIDS virus to male sexual partners.

- 13 percent indicated that they did not know whether women could give the AIDS virus to male sexual partners.

- 94 percent knew that men can get the AIDS virus from female prostitutes.

- 82 percent knew that one cannot tell from a person's appearance whether he or she carries the AIDS virus. Unfortunately, 12 percent did not know, and seven percent thought appearance does reveal infection status.

- 86 percent knew that a pregnant woman can give the AIDS virus to her unborn child.

"Although the survey indicates that Mississippians are fairly knowledgeable about how a person can get AIDS and the AIDS virus, it also indicates that Mississippians are not quite so knowledgeable about how the virus is not transmitted," Dr. Thompson said.

"The single item of most concern in this area," he said, "is the fact that 32 percent of those questioned believed that a person could get the AIDS virus by donating blood, which is absolutely untrue. An additional 12 percent did not know whether one could, and only 57 percent answered correctly that one could not contract the AIDS virus by donating blood."

"Clearly," he added, the Department of Health, the blood banking community, and others in our state have a long way to go toward educating Mississippians that no risk whatever is involved in contracting the AIDS virus through donating blood."

Questions about several other ways in which the AIDS virus is not transmitted also reveal some lack of knowledge. Although most respondents answered these questions correctly, a significant minority either did not know the correct answer or answered incorrectly:

- 48 percent knew that mosquitoes do not transmit AIDS, but 23 percent incorrectly said they do, and 29 percent did not know.

- 61 percent knew one cannot get the AIDS virus by being next to someone who has the virus and coughs or sneezes, but 19 percent incorrectly answered that it is possible, and 20 percent did not know.

- 60 percent correctly said AIDS is not transmitted through use of public restrooms, but 23 percent—incorrectly—said it is, and 18 percent did not know.

- 49 percent were aware that food servers do not transmit the AIDS virus through serving food, but 22 percent mistakenly believed they do, and 29 percent did not know.

- 56 percent knew that AIDS and the AIDS virus are not transmitted through public swimming pools, but 21 percent incorrectly answered that is a transmission route, and 23 percent did not know.

"Mississippians are much better educated about some other routes of transmission," Dr. Thompson said.

- 86 percent knew that AIDS and the AIDS virus are not transmitted through living in the same neighborhood as a person with AIDS.

- 75 percent knew the virus is not transmitted through shaking hands with someone who has the AIDS virus. Reason for concern, 13 percent mistakenly believed the virus could be transmitted this way, and 12 percent did not know.

- 77 percent knew that the AIDS virus is not transmitted by being in the same school classroom as a child with AIDS—"a reasonably good level of knowledge," Dr. Thompson said, "but of concern because"—9 percent incorrectly said the virus could be transmitted in this way, and 14 percent did not know.

- 79 percent correctly said a person cannot get the AIDS virus by working in the same office with someone else who has the virus, but, again cause for concern, 8 percent said one could, and 13 percent did not know.

"Mississippians were likewise reasonably knowledgeable about how to avoid contracting AIDS virus infection," Dr. Thompson said:

- 94 percent knew that a person can find out whether he or she has the AIDS virus.

- 85 percent correctly said that a person can do some things to reduce his or her risk of being exposed to the AIDS virus. Those persons were fairly knowledgeable about how to reduce exposure.

"The most commonly mentioned how-to—cited by 35 percent of those responding—was 'stay with one partner,'" Dr. Thompson said. "Since limitation of sexual activity to a mutually monogamous relationship with an uninfected partner is the single most effective preventive strategy against AIDS virus infection, we're reassured that many Mississippians already know this."

"The next most commonly mentioned preventive strategy was to use condoms," the state epidemiologist said. "This is also significant; for those who choose not to maintain a mutually monogamous relationship, the use of condoms is an important protective measure, but it is not absolutely protective."

Other preventive strategies mentioned were, "Don't share needles; avoid illegal drugs; avoid prostitutes; and avoid homosexual sex."

"We are somewhat concerned that 14 percent of those questioned suggested avoiding people with AIDS or the AIDS virus, and that 7 percent mentioned avoiding homosexuals as ways of avoiding the virus," Dr. Thompson said.

"Since the virus is not contracted simply by being around people with the virus or people at risk for having the virus, this does represent some lack of understanding and indicates the need for additional education."

Finally, the survey dealt with opinions and attitudes, not just factual knowledge.

Dr. Thompson commented, "In several important areas, the opinions expressed seem to reflect a good understanding of the scientific facts about the AIDS virus and its transmission and about the most effective ways of dealing with its spread. Most significant, an overwhelming 99 percent said Mississippi schools should teach students about how to avoid AIDS."

"Another response that indicates a generally good understanding of the virus' transmission was the 66 percent 'yes' to whether children with AIDS or the AIDS virus should be allowed to attend school," he said. "The 18 percent who said no and the 15 percent who did not know indicate a need for additional education in this area."

The majority of Mississippians—54 percent—apparently believe that employers should not be allowed to fire workers who have the AIDS virus; 20 percent did not know.

"Most Mississippians apparently do not believe that people with the AIDS virus should be quarantined," he concluded. "Fifty-five percent of those questioned said they should not be, again reflecting an understanding that the virus' transmission does not occur through casual contact as with other communicable diseases."

"Regrettably," he said, "31 percent indicated that people with the AIDS virus should be quarantined, and 15 percent did not know whether they should or not."

The state epidemiologist announced intentions to repeat this survey on a similar sample annually for the next several years to help guide and better target the education and prevention efforts

Attorney General to ask State Supreme Court to review decision

Attorney General Ed Pittman said last week that he will ask the Mississippi Supreme Court to reconsider the decision handed down on Wednesday, Dec. 2 which reversed the conviction of a Harrison County man found guilty by a jury of raping his four-year-old daughter.

In the opinion, written by Justice Dan Lee, the Court said there were no reversible errors made at trial, but concluded that the testimony given by the child and her mother was not believable.

"It is inconceivable to me that the Supreme Court would put itself in the place of the jury," Pittman said. "It is the jury's job to decide the credibility of each witness; the Supreme Court's function is to review the law."

Pittman said the justices only read the testimony from the record. "They did not see the witnesses on the stand; they did not have the opportunity to observe them as they were telling their stories. The jury did."

Our whole judicial system is based on the integrity of the jury and on the ability of twelve impartial persons to tell which witnesses are lying and which are telling the truth. The Supreme Court by sending this case back for a second trial with another jury is, in effect, saying that it has no faith in the jury system."

Pittman said a valid question would be what happens if the second jury also finds the man guilty on the same testimony. "Do they then send it back for a third trial? How many times does the state have to prove a man's guilt?"

"The Court in this decision showed little regard for the law and no compassion at all for the child victim," he said.

MADD OBSERVANCE CONTINUES—Hancock County Deputy Nathan Hoda Jr. bends the antenna on his patrol car to allow Mothers Against Drunk Driving President Susan McKinley to tie a red ribbon around it. Law enforcement officers, MADD members and other participants are displaying the red ribbons in observance of National Drunk and Drugged Drivers Awareness Week, which continues through Saturday. McKinley said people who choose to drink during the holiday season are urged to contact local law enforcement agencies for rides home or to use designated drivers rather than drive after drinking. ## Many factors influence food safety Holidays fill most people with thoughts of fun and food. Mississippi's public health team concentrate on food safety.

"So many factors influence food safety," said Rick Herrington, director of food sanitation, Mississippi State Department of Health.

"And so many people are cooking and eating."

"We routinely inspect, assure the safety of, and permit commercial food service establishments," Herrington said. "We have no jurisdiction in private homes. But we know that, especially at this time of year, food from private kitchens goes to church dinners and bake sales as well as to family reunions, where holding conditions may be less than ideal."

"Even some commercial catering is done from home kitchens," Herrington said. "Though the practice is strictly illegal, public health sanitarians rarely get involved or inform unless there's an outbreak of foodborne illness."

State law requires caterers to meet the same requirements for food preparation as restaurateurs.

"Misleading food is the main cause of foodborne illness," said Dr. Joe Graves, director of the State Department of Health-clinical laboratory. "Usually, the food was not cooked long enough or was not held at the proper temperature after cooking."

One of the main culprits is salmonella, which Registered Dietitian Kathy Applewhite calls "common as dirt. It's safe to say that some of the 2,000 strains of salmonella are on most protein food—eggs, milk, poultry, meat, and fish (from which salmonella gets its name)."

"Obviously salmonella gets into the kitchen on raw animal products, but heat kills salmonella," Ms. Applewhite said. "Cooked chicken is safe chicken. Since few people eat chicken raw, there should be no problem."

"But if the chicken was contaminated," she added, "all equipment used in preparing it would also have become contaminated: the cutting board, sink, knife, colander, counter top, and the hands of the cook. If this same cutting board, sink, knife, colander, counter, and hands are used to prepare a salad that isn't cooked, then there's a problem. And the longer the salad waits at room temperature, the more the bacteria multiply."

Other sources of salmonella infection are rodents, flies, roaches, pets, and unwashed hands. These carriers transfer the bacteria from its natural habitat, the digestive system of man and animals, into the food supply.

To make sure their food is safe, home cooks should follow the same food-handling rules that sanitarians require of commercial kitchens:

- Cook poultry until there is no pink color (internal temperature of 165 degrees F). Cook all meat to 140 degrees or above.
- Clean kitchen equipment thoroughly between preparation of each food item.

- Use an acrylic cutting board or scrub and sanitize wooden cutting boards after preparing raw meat.
- Store cold food in the refrigerator right up until serving time.

- Hold hot food at temperatures of at least 140 degrees F. Never let any food sit around lukewarm or at room temperature.

- Always wash hands after going to the bathroom, before preparing food, and between preparation of each item.

- Keep kitchen free of pests and keep pets away from food preparation.

Cooks who follow these guidelines can avoid needing the services of the State Public Health Laboratory, Dr. Graves said.

"We're happy to help a family who requests our assistance," he said, "but our emphasis must be with food suspected of making more than one or two people ill. We're basically concerned with possible mishandling of food by restaurant personnel and caterers and keeping them from making the same mistakes again."

Additional information about safe food-handling practice is available by contacting Herrington at the central offices in Jackson, telephone 960-7690, or the sanitarian at the county health department.

1987 wastewater disposal act outlined

Changes in a 10-year-old-law promise homeowners some slack and contractors some protection, says Lydia Strayer, director of general sanitation, Mississippi State Department of Health.

The Legislature in its 1987 session amended the Mississippi Individual Onsite Wastewater Disposal Act of 1978. Lawmakers mandated that—for the first time—all wastewater disposal systems be approved for installation and that contractors in the construction and disposal business be licensed.

Broadly, the State Department of Health regulates wastewater disposal systems for single family residences, and the Commission on Natural Resources regulates commercial systems.

"We deal with most single family residences," Ms. Strayer said. "Our regulations, which the State Board of Health adopted in October, cover underground absorption and surface discharge to state waters of anything less than 400 gallons a day—generally, the amount a single family residence would produce."

"The Department of Natural Resources covers public sewer systems and any discharge of over 400 gallons a day, including apartment complexes and commercial establishments, for example."

The amended Wastewater Disposal Act allows homeowners to choose from a variety of disposal systems, not just septic tanks and underground absorption systems. Mr. Strayer said.

"Depending on the limitations of the property itself," she explained, "the homeowner can choose from a wide range of options, including underground absorption, surface discharge of treated effluent into suitable state waters, and surface discharge of treated effluent contained on the property of the generator—through a sprinkler system, for example. This gives homeowners some slack while also assuring safe, public health conscious disposal."

Individuals who wish to install an individual wastewater disposal system on their property should contact the county sanitarian at the local health department. The sanitarian will furnish an application and help arrange for a site evaluation. The applicant must provide a plot plan of the property, giving property size, legal description, and proposed house site. Before getting written approval of a completed system—required before use—the applicant must also pay a $35 permit fee to the county health department.

Also dependent on site evaluation, a property owner can get approval for individual onsite wastewater disposal systems if public sewers are not available or economically feasible. The system must meet applicable requirements of the health or natural resources agency and the Federal Clean Water Act.

Developers of small subdivisions—from 10 to 19 lots—must submit a plat of the development to the Department of Health, arrange for a site evaluation, and get preliminary approval.

For development of more than 19 lots, the property owner must provide the Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Pollution Control, a feasibility study prepared by a registered engineer. The State Department of Health must receive a copy of the Bureau's response to the feasibility study before determining whether an individual onsite wastewater disposal system can be used.

Finally, effective Jan. 1, 1988, any contractor must apply and take a competency test for licensure as a business constructing onsite sewage treatment and disposal systems or disposing of the sludge and liquid waste from such systems. Such contractors, who'll pay a $50 licensure fee, should apply to the public health district sanitarian.

District sanitarians, who supervise multi-county areas, are located at Batesville, Tupelo, Greenwood, Starkville, Jackson, Meridian, McComb, Hattiesburg and Gulfport.

'Rockschool' series begins Saturday

Rockschool, television's only how-to rock music series which offers instruction in the technique, theory and craft behind contemporary music, returns for its second season on national public television beginning Saturday, Dec. 19 at 6:30 p.m.

The 24-week season will be comprised of eight all-new episodes of the series, an encore of the eight episodes from Rockscool's premiere 1985 season, followed by a rebroadcast of the all-new episodes.

A co-production of WNET/New York and BBC Television, Rockscool is made possible in part by a grant from Yamaha Music Corporation/Digital Musical Instruments Division.

The series is presented on national public television by WNET/New York and distributed by the Inter-regional Program Service (IPS).

Hosted by keyboard artist and music pioneer Herbie Hancock, winner of the 1986 Oscar for his score for the film 'Round Midnight,' Rockscool offers viewers a first-hand introduction to the technology, technique and musical vocabulary that are used by today's professional rock groups.

The series' 'how-to' approach enables musicians at all levels of expertise—as well as rock music lovers—to gain a fresh understanding of the instrumental techniques and music theory that together produce blues, rock, funk, reggae and new wave styles.

Each half-hour program features a blend of specialty-filmed interviews with some of the world's most innovative players, concert footage of the great names in rock, and studio demonstrations by the Rockscool Band: Deirdre Cartwright (guitar), Geoff Nicholls (drums), Henry Thomas (bass) and Alastair Gavin (keyboards).

Expanding on the original 1985 series, which focused on the ways in which guitar, bass and drums work together in a band context, the eight all-new episodes now include two new elements: keyboards and vocals.

The new programs chart recent developments in music technology, from FM synthesis, to M.I.D.I., to sampling; give up-dates on playing techniques, from 'fretboard tapping' on guitar and bass to programming drum machines; and offer practical advice on arranging, performing and vocalizing.

"The second season is actually a new, improved version of Rockscool," says David Thomas, project director of the series for WNET/New York.

"The emphasis is still on teaching rock music as a craft, but with better production values, clearer and more concise explanations, and some very good rock 'n' roll," the eight new episodes were co-produced by WNET and the BBC and took two years to complete; the original 1985 season was produced by the BBC.

Among the leading players of rock and roll who are interviewed and share their expertise on the series are Andy Summers, The Police; Tony Banks, Genesis; Michael McDonald, ex-Doobie Brothers; Omar Hakim, ex-Weather Report; Sting; Jools Holland, Squeeze; Jan Hammer, creator of music for 'Miami Vice,' and singer James Ingram.

Concert clips of such popular stars as Genesis, The Police, James Brown, B. B. King, Jimi Hendrix, Chet Atkins, The Beach Boys, The Eurythmics, The Everly Brothers, Elton John, The Pointer Sisters, and Yes illustrate how Rockscool's 'lessons' are practiced by professionals in performance.

Giving is the spirit of Christmas

Give the Christmas gift that keeps giving all year long to people right here in Mississippi through the American Cancer Society, Mississippi Division.

The long-range goal of the American Cancer Society is to eliminate cancer; their short-range goals of saving lives and minimizing suffering are equally important.

Your volunteer contributions bring the Society even closer to these goals. Mississippi Division contributions in 1987 reached 8,055 cancer patients out of the state's 13,547 total cancer patients, reaching 59 percent of the potential population.

Your gift to the American Cancer Society goes directly to help those who need the Society's special services. In Mississippi, your contribution may go to help arrange lodging for the family of a cancer patient traveling to another state for treatment.

Or it may be used to restock loan closets which supply cancer patients with durable medical equipment at no cost.

Your dollars also help fund "I Can Cope" self-help groups for cancer patients meeting across the state. In Hinds County, donations are being used this Christmas to distribute gift baskets to indigent cancer patients and their families. Last year, volunteer dollars were used to provide a grant for a local medical student to continue her education in biochemistry and cancer research.

For more information on how you can join in the fight against cancer through a donation to the American Cancer Society, Mississippi Division, or on how you can become a volunteer in the organization, call (601) 362-8874.

9-Lives buys out Biloxi's Kozy Kitten

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Star-Kist Foods, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of H. J. Heinz Company, announced that it has entered into an agreement to acquire the assets of Mavar Shrimp & Oyster Company, Inc., Mavar Boat Company, Inc. and Mavar Products, Ltd., all of Biloxi. The Mavar companies produce and market canned and dry cat foods. Their flagship line, 'Kozy Kitten,' is among the leading brands in its marketing areas, principally the southeastern and southwestern United States.

Dr. Anthony J. F. O'Reilly, Heinz chairman, president and chief executive officer, called the acquisition, "an exciting addition to our growing pet foods business and a complement to our 9 Lives cat foods brand."

Mavar Shrimp & Oyster Company operates a plant in Biloxi. Mavar Boat Company maintains six trawlers in the Gulf of Mexico. Mavar Products handles product marketing, sales and distribution.

NASA names manager of Special Projects Office

Sidney P. Saucier of Huntsville has been named manager of the Special Projects Office at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. He has served as deputy manager of the office since November 1986.

The Special Projects Office is currently assigned responsibility for the Inertial Upper Stage, Transfer Orbit Stage, the Payload Assist Module, the Orbital Maneuvering Vehicle, the Tethered Satellite System, and the Combined Release and Radiation Effects Satellite projects.

Saucier joined the Marshall center in June 1962 as a propulsion and power engineer in the former Propulsion and Vehicle Engineering Division. He subsequently held engineering and technical management positions of increasing responsibility, including that as project engineer for the RL-10 hydrogen/oxygen engine in the former Propulsion and Vehicle Engineering Laboratory.

He transferred to the Program

Development Directorate when it was established in 1969, where he had overall responsibility for planning and developing engineering analyses and studies directed toward the definition of space transportation and exploration systems.

In 1977, he became the NASA-Marshall Space Flight Center representative for the Inertial Upper Stage at Air Force Space Division in Los Angeles.

In October 1980, Saucier returned to Huntsville as deputy manager of the Inertial Upper Stage Project in the Special Projects Office.

Saucier was appointed manager of the Inertial Upper Stage Project in October 1982 and assumed the added responsibility as manager of the Transfer Orbit Stage Project in December 1985.

He was awarded the NASA Exceptional Service Medal in 1985 for his management of the IUS Project activities which led to the successful mission of the IUS on STS-51-C.

Saucier is chairman of the Huntsville-Madison County Airport Authority and a member of the Huntsville-Madison County Chamber of Commerce Executive Board of Directors.

He and his wife, Pat, have three children.

ETV Brief

LEO ON LOVE

Love is in the air as Mississippi ETV presents two hours of back-to-back programs with Leo Buscaglia, lecturer, college professor and best-selling author of such books as 'Love, who will be reliving his childhood memories and encouraging others to do the same when 'In Search of Love with Leo Buscaglia' and 'Stories of Christmas Love with Leo Buscaglia' air beginning at 9 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 22, on Mississippi ETV.

"What we really need to do is to remember what it was like to be a kid," Buscaglia says in 'Christmas Love.' "I don't care how old you are, you still have that kid somewhere. Go find him or her and remember what it was like when you still believed in everything."

'In Search of Love' features ordinary people who do extraordinary things. Daddy Bruce Randolph, an 85-year-old bar owner from Denver, is one of the people Buscaglia meets in his quest. Each year Randolph feeds thousands of homeless and hungry people. "I just grew up in a givin' mood," Randolph explains.

It is this message that Christmas should be a time for joyous giving that binds the two one-hour specials. "The basis of the psychology of giving is very simple," Buscaglia says. "Does the gift show love? If the gift shows love, then there is no small gift. If you want to give the best gift—give yourself."

Mississippi's Christmas tree future promising

MISSISSIPPI STATE—Mississippians are attempting to capture the local market for quality Christmas trees from the traditional northern producers.

Tim Traugott, area forester with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said Christmas tree sales are about a $6 million business in Mississippi. The Louisiana-Mississippi Christmas Tree Association, with 550 members, is the third largest Christmas tree association in the nation.

He said that although northern markets have been the larger and more established businesses, southern producers are gaining strength.

"The key to the success of the southern-grown trees is quality," Traugott said. "Quality is the name of the game and southern trees, such as the Virginia pine, can compete with any northern species shipped to the South."

The two markets available are the wholesale markets, which sell to retail lots and stores to be resold, and the "Choose and cut" markets, where individuals can go to the field and cut their own.

Traugott said about 250,000 Christmas trees will be sold in the state in 1987. Of those sold, about 100,000 will be "choose and cut" and 150,000 will be wholesale. A major benefit of locally grown trees is that they are fresher than the northern trees.

The specialist said even though the local market is strong, potential growers may not want to rush into the business. "Growing quality trees takes a lot more work than people realize," Traugott said. "It takes a minimum of three-to-four years of intensive management, including site preparation, planting, weed and disease control and trimming."

Those interested in beginning a Christmas tree farm may contact their county agent for information on the Christmas Tree Association and the work involved in operating a tree farm.

Dr. Freddie Raspberry, horticulture specialist with MCEES, said another seasonal plant increasing in production popularity in the state is the poinsettia.

Raspberry estimated the poinsettia market to be about a $1.5 million business in Mississippi. He said the state's long nights and short days are ideal for poinsettia production. Although some of the surrounding states produce twice as many of the Christmas flower, Mississippi's market is slowly expanding.

In other agriculture news, county Extension agents report that good weather has enabled farmers to complete most harvesting activities although dry conditions lessened yields in some counties.

"Dry fall weather greatly hampered establishment of cool season forage crops," said Lafayette County Agent Ed Williams. "Only a few hundred acres of wheat were planted and dry weather has resulted in scattered, thin strands with low yield potential."

Chickasaw County Agent William Johnson said recent rains had helped winter grazing conditions delayed by drought.

Favorable wheat conditions are being reported by county agents in Chickasaw, Sharkey, Noxubee and Walthall counties.

Many farmers are looking toward off-season duties such as tax preparation, record keeping and equipment maintenance.

AWARD WINNER

"Hanukkah," Mississippi ETV's award-winning half-hour documentary that explores the more than 2,000-year-old Jewish mid-winter celebration, can be seen again this holiday season at 3:30 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 20.

Edward Asner is host of the documentary recounting the events that led to the annual celebration and eight-day festival.

"Hanukkah, the Festival of Lights, the Festival of the Rededication of the Jewish temple...celebrated every year in December, Hanukkah recalls the bravery, tenacity and historical circumstances—some call it miracle—that permitted the ancient Israelites over 2,000 years ago to preserve their freedom and with it the spiritual source from which Judaism draws its meaning," Asner says in the film.

Hanukkah is a time for family unity, and the program uses the home service, including the lighting of the eight-candle menorah, as the thread of continuity that links the historical exposition to modern practices and beliefs.

From New York City's Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the "Paul Winter Consort Winter Solstice Whole Earth Christmas Celebration" will air on Monday, Dec. 21 at 8:30 p.m. This program features two hours of new instrumental music derived from traditional folk songs and carols performed by the Paul Winter Consort, one of the country's most famous New Age music ensembles.

"Christmas with the Philadelphia Singers," to be broadcast Wednesday, Dec. 23, at noon, features a haunting medieval processional, followed by music by Palestrina, motets by Poulenc and a Christmas classic by Respighi, culminating in a set of carols sung by both chorus and audience.

On Thursday, Dec. 24 at 9 a.m., the "Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols" will be broadcast live from King's College in Cambridge, England, and will be repeated that evening at 8 p.m.

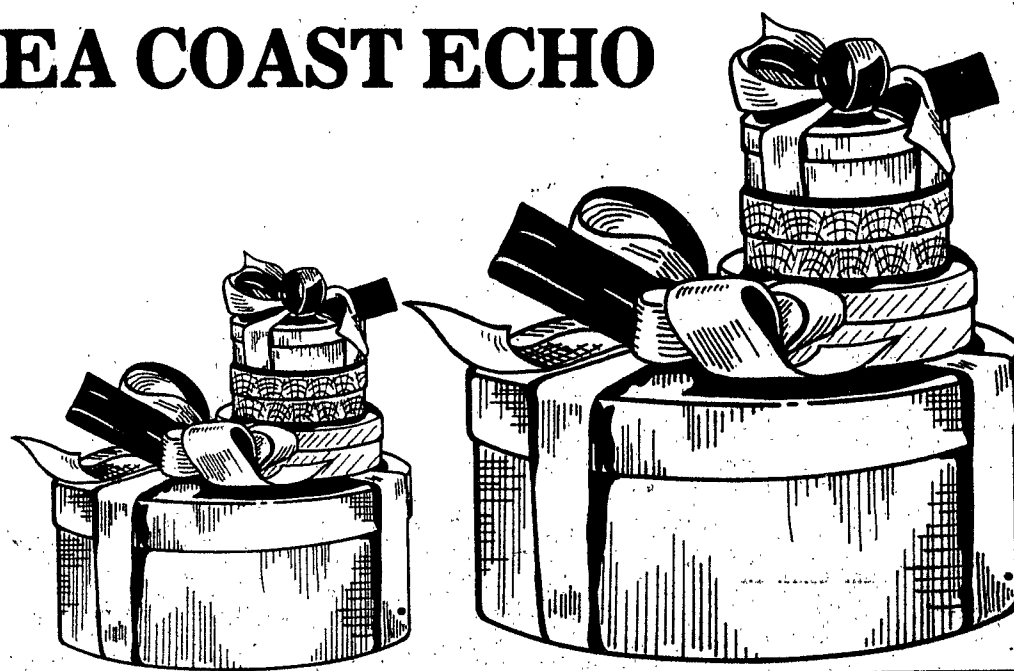

Also on Thursday, Dec. 24, at noon, PRM presents "Echoes of Christmas," the annual Christmas offering by the popular Dale Warland Singers. This group is familiar to PRM listeners through their many guest appearances on "A Prairie Home Companion" and "Saint Paul Sunday Morning." The concert will feature some of the carols and anthems of the season, performed in the inimitable style of this choral group.

MC GUIRE
CAIRE

On 'Christmas Day in the Morning'—or afternoon—and all throughout the holidays, egg nog is to many of us a symbol of the season, richer than rich and oh-so-good.

It has long been a tradition in my family, too—and as usual at this holiday time, I'm receiving calls for the recipe, along with requests for Cafe Brulot, special appetizers and 'go-withs' as we call them, and so on.

Of course, you may prefer to buy your egg nog in cartons at the supermarket, adding liquor or not as you choose, but to me and mine there's nothing quite like:

MC GUIRE CLAN'S EGG NOG

1 doz eggs
1 cup sugar
1 qt. cream (or half and half)
1 pint bourbon
Two or three ounces rum
Two or three tsp. vanilla

First, separate the yolks and whites of the eggs in separate bowls, of course. To the yolks, add a cup of sugar and beat well together, then add the cream or half and half, along with generous splashes of vanilla, continuing to beat all the while.

Next, stir in ever so slowly, a pint of good bourbon and two or three ounces of rum—we prefer the dark rum for egg nog.

Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, and fold into the other ingredients. Chill well. As you serve the egg nog, grate nutmeg atop each cup. (Of course, again, you may use already-grated nutmeg, but we like to grate sprinkles from a whole nutmeg atop the egg nog as we serve it).

You may add milk if you like your egg nog thinner, but the ever-so-thick and creamy, almost-have-to-stir-with-a-spoon is the true McGuire Egg Nog.

We've always made ours a batch or so at a time, but you may increase proportions and make several batches at once—we're quite traditional and ceremonial about our egg nog, as you can see!

For years, we invited friends to Open House on New Year's Day, with egg nog the star of the celebration, along with coffee and various accompaniments.

State's pecan crop in jeopardy

Mississippi's pecan crop may be in serious trouble this fall because a late freeze last spring may reduce yields as much as 30 percent in some areas.

"The real problem that we are having this fall is that we have green nuts still in the shucks and still on the tree," said Dr. Freddie Rasberry, horticulture specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "In many cases these nuts will not come off the tree."

"To a certain extent we have this problem every year but this year we are having a real high percentage of stick-tight nuts on the tree that won't come off," he said.

"Rasberry cites the freeze that brought snow to some areas of the state around the first of April as the cause of the problem. At the time, specialists realized damage had been done to the peach and blueberry crops and to a certain extent they realized some damage had been done to the state's pecans. However, Rasberry said they did not realize the freeze would result in a delay to the crop.

"If we look back to the early spring and the late freeze we got, we didn't realize how significant this was going to be," Rasberry said.

"It appears that that late freeze probably delayed the pecan crop a couple of weeks—just enough that some of the nuts, primarily the late maturing nuts, have not and will not mature because of this fall's early frosts," he said.

"This is going to reduce our overall yield in Mississippi and probably throughout the Southeast," the specialist said. "On the coastal regions, where the late freeze did not reach, the drought that we experienced caused the crop to mature out even though it might be of a little less quality."

Although the exact yield reduction will not be known until early 1988, people in adjoining states are indicating a reduction of 5 to 30 percent, the specialist said.

The impact on pecan prices cannot yet be predicted, Rasberry said. Although pecans of high quality will be scarce, they will bring a premium price at the markets.

Rasberry said next year's crop will probably not be affected.

"The energy the tree has to expend to produce the nut has already been expended for next year," he said. "More than likely, it will be as if we did harvest all these nuts—at least that is how the tree will see it."

Coconut adds different flavor to holiday dishes

There's an old saying that goes like this—"He who plants a coconut tree, plants vessels and clothing, food and drink, a habitation for himself and a heritage for his children."

The coconut palm tree is one of the most important trees in the world. While it doesn't grow in Mississippi, coconut is a traditional Mississippi holiday food.

The home of the coconut groves is in the tropical areas where conditions are right for producing good quality. The Florida coast at Miami and Palm Beach is the only producing area in the United States.

Most of the coconuts found in grocery stores are supplied by the Philippine Islands, Ceylon, Honduras, Indonesia and Puerto Rico.

Though coconuts are produced all year round, heaviest yield is October through December. However, substantial supplies are available from February through April. You may prefer to prepare and freeze coconut for use any time during the year.

Choosing a good quality coconut is easy. It should be heavy for its size, contain milk that sloshes around (without liquid, it's apt to be spoiled) and has eyes (three soft spots on top) that are firm and dry. Wet or moldy eyes also indicate spoilage.

If you want to save the coconut milk, puncture the three eyes with a screwdriver, ice-pick, or nail and hammer. Then drain the milk. To remove the shell tap the coconut gently with a hammer all the way around to crack the shell.

To remove the meat easily, place coconut in the oven for 30 minutes at 350 degrees. This shrinks the meat away from the shell. Remember that a coconut is about 47 percent waste—but there is lots of good eating from the other 53 percent.

For a party or special guest, use coconuts in special and interesting ways for more fun. Cut coconuts in half with a power saw and use the halves as dishes to serve fruit salads, curried rice, ice cream, etc. Remove the meat or leave it in. Coconut shells (again—with or without the meat) make interesting beverage containers.

Coconut chunks, eaten out-of-hand, are wonderful snack items. Or perhaps you will grate the fresh coconut and serve it over ice cream, cakes, fruit salads, gelatin puddings or desserts. Toasted coconut is another tasty snack item.

Use a vegetable peeler on the coconut meat and cut into thin strips. Place a layer in a pan and toast at 300 degrees. Salt the coconut, too, if you wish, for an especially tasty snack treat.

In the shell, coconuts will keep about a month, if refrigerated. If not refrigerated they dry out to become moldy. After the shell is broken, store unused coconut, tightly covered, in the refrigerator. Coconut meat dries out rapidly when exposed to air and loses its flavor.

One-half cup coconut contains about 88 calories. One tablespoon contains about 22 calories. One medium-sized coconut makes approximately three cups shredded, or three cups small chunks.

Much of the processed coconut meat available in the retail stores has been sweetened, grated and packaged.

Bay basketball team begins winning ways

The Bay High School basketball teams will entertain Pass High Thursday night at the Tiger Dome with a Junior Varsity game beginning at 5 p.m.

After eight consecutive setbacks the Bay High Tiger Basketball Team has broken the win column Tuesday with a win over homestanding Pearl River Central.

The Tigers edged out a hard-fought 66-62 victory while the Tigerettes fell to an experienced Pearl River Central team 48-36.

The Tigers were led to victory by Cedric Walker with 17 points and 12 rebounds, Freddie Necaise put in 12 points and added 11 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Micah Necaise had 10 points and four assists with Benny Tillman adding nine points and Heath Hopgood six.

Pearl River Central was led by Adam Jones with 20 points and Chris Lee with 20.

In the girls contest the Tigerettes were led by Tunisa McKay with 14 points and nine rebounds and Lawanka Williams with nine points and seven rebounds.

Pearl River Central was led by Jennifer Lossett with 12 points with Antha Dupont and Wendy Pamer adding 10 each.

Bay High School Coach Michael Ladner was very pleased with the victory and optimistic about the future, but says the teams need experience to be quality ball clubs.

"I'm very pleased to finally get this first victory to get our basketball program going in the right direction in the win column," he said.

"I believe we are going in the right direction with other aspects of our program.

"The kids we are putting on the floor are representing Bay High with pride.

"I'm very pleased for the boys; this group has been working hard and they deserve a win. They showed a maturity you like to see in young kids.

"We were 0 and 8, we had just been beaten and embarrassed last Friday at Stone, 107-65, by one of the best teams in the state, but these kids kept their heads high, their enthusiasm up and they went in to PRC and beat a team that is very tough to beat at home.

"I believe this team has a bright future," Ladner said.

"I'm also pleased with the effort by the girls. These girls are improving every game.

"We don't have a large number of girls out but the ones I have are improving as individuals and as a team.

"Their attitudes continuously improve each day, although we have yet to break the win column.

"The outing last night I was very pleased with. We showed signs of being a good ball club in the future.

"If these girls will hang in there and work hard the victories will come.

Both the boys and girls are off to rough starts but with hard work, perseverance and enthusiasm these teams will have good futures," Ladner said.

Before the games Tuesday, the Tigers and Tigerettes were playing hard but couldn't get a victory, he said.

Friday Bay High went to Stone and dropped two to the Tomcats.

Stone won the boys' contest 107-65 and the girls' 59-48.

The Bay was led by Cedric Walker with 16 points with Benny Tillman and Micah Necaise adding 15 each.

Stone County was led by Dontae Galloway with 16 points.

In the girls' contest Bay High put in a courageous effort led by Tunisa McKay with 20 points and Deborah Deloach with 12.

Shuwonda Redeemer led Stone County with 25.

On Dec. 8 Bay High traveled to Picayune and dropped three games. The varsity boys fell 73-39. The girls lost 47-37 and the junior varsity boys went down fighting 59-34.

Bay High boys were led by Cedric Walker with 11 points and 11 rebounds. Benny Tillman followed with seven points while Freddie Necaise added five points and seven rebounds.

Picayune was lead by Russ Harris with 20 and Juan Aultman with 14.

Bay High girls were led by Deborah Deloach with seven points and Stacey Sheppard and Tunisa McKay with six each.

DeDe McGowan contributed greatly with seven rebounds, three steals and her ball handling and defense.

Patrice Avery also added nine rebounds in the Tigerette effort.

Picayune was led by Sheila Gilmore with 12 points and Kristi Mitchell with 10 rebounds.

Before the Picayune game Bay High dropped two to St. Martin in the Pass High tournament.

The boys fell in a close contest 58-56 and the girls lost 60-25.

The boys were led by Benny Tillman with 21 points and five rebounds with Cedric Walker adding 10 points and nine rebounds. Micah Necaise chipped in nine.

St. Martin was led by Mickey Dutil with 14.

Bay High girls were led by Tunisa McKay with nine points while Paula Hayes helped St. Martin with 14.

Eagles stop Wildcats

The Pearl River College Wildcats dropped a 78-75 South Division game to the Hinds Eagles at Raymond, Monday night.

The loss was the Wildcats' first setback in the division, while their overall ledger fell to 5-4.

Last week PRC beat East Central and earlier handled the Utica Bulldogs. Both were South victories.

Hinds led 36-23 at the half and the point spread was just too much for the Peter Georgian-led 'Cats to overcome.

Arthur Dozier scored 20, while Adrian McCray netted 19 and Thomas Foster 12.

Delgado Junior College won the Pearl River Coke Classic last week on the PRC campus. Delgado beat PRC 90-81, Gulf Coast 70-69 and Mary Homes 77-63.

The Wildcats won over Natchez (101-61) but lost to Bosier Parish 94-76.

The Wildcats will entertain Southwest Thursday before hitting the road to finish out the first semester action against Delgado in New Orleans Saturday.

Gulfview Bulldogs buoyed by Superdome experience

By Brenda Frechou

Gulfview Elementary School Bulldogs played against Ellander Memorial Junior High School on Saturday, Dec. 12 in the New Orleans Superdome prior to high school championship games.

Although defeated 58-6, the Bulldogs maintained a good attitude about the game.

Members of the football team and those who accompanied them to the Dome were interviewed at the Lakeshore campus upon their return from New Orleans.

Coach Fred Bilbo stated, "We were the first Mississippi junior high school to play football in the Superdome and the kids worked hard this year and deserved to go."

"I was satisfied with their effort and they did their best but we were outclassed, and Ellander was the best team."

He went on to say, "We were the only team in five years to score in a game with Ellander and it was great that we had a chance to go there and play."

"Even though we lost, it was a wonderful experience and we're satisfied."

"The best team won but I'm proud of my team and wouldn't trade them for anything because they're good kids and that's what's important."

Doug Authement Sr., father of quarterback Doug Authement Jr., accompanied the Bulldogs to the Superdome and commented, "The other team physically overpowered them by size and strength. Our kids gave it everything they possibly could. They played their hearts out and I'm proud of the whole team."

"They'll remember having played in the Superdome for the rest of their lives."

Tammy Tosso, captain of the cheerleaders said, "The team played hard and I enjoyed the game."

"The team tried hard and it was fun to cheer them on in the Dome," commented cheerleader Tina Richards.

Sherman Davis, halfback who scored the Bulldogs' only touchdown, said, "I was glad to play in the Superdome and I felt privileged to be there. The other kids were a lot bigger than us and I was glad to get a touchdown."

"We fought hard and appreciated the support that we got from people in the crowd."

Quarterback Doug Authement Jr. said, "It took a lot of work to get there and it felt great to play. We were a little nervous playing in front of so many people, but we had fun."

"We lost but that doesn't matter because we had the opportunity to play in the Superdome."

"I enjoyed playing in the dome and I thank the people in New Orleans for inviting us to play," was the response from Stanley Garcia.

"We lost but I'm not ashamed to say it because I gave it all I had."

"We've never played on a turf before and that was a new experience."

Troy Theriot, right guard for the Bulldogs, stated, "I was proud to go to the Superdome and represent my school."

SSC Varsity, JV post soccer wins over OLV

The St. Stanislaus Soccer Team continued its winning ways with a double victory over Our Lady of Victories in soccer games played Monday evening at Rockchaw stadium.

The Varsity Rocks defeated OLV 4-3, while the Junior Varsity won to increase their win-loss record to 5-0. Coach Mick Quinlan was pleased with the effort of his players, as the varsity improved their record to 3-1-1.

"We played a solid match against OLV," said Quinlan. "We tired a little in the last 10 minutes when they scored two goals, but considering the intense pressure we applied in the first 70 minutes, I'm not too dissatisfied."

"We really got after it at the opening whistle and when the halftime whistle sounded, I was even surprised to look up and realize we were up 4-1," commented Quinlan.

"The OLV effort showed me that we have progressed from the Pascagoula. From here on out, you're going to see some wide open, exciting soccer from the Rocks," concluded Quinlan.

The SSC Junior Varsity extended its streak to 5-0 with its decisive win over the OLV Junior Varsity. Thus far this season, the SSC JV has scored 21 goals, while holding their opponents to only 2.

Lady Cats drop Eagles

Picayune's Antrice McGill scored 42 points to lead the Pearl River College Lady Wildcats to a 102-96 overtime victory over the Hinds Lady Eagles at Raymond Monday night.

The Lady 'Cats, now 2-1 in the South Division, overcame a 46-39 halftime deficit to end regulation play at 85 all.

Last week the Lady 'Cats beat East Central for their first South win of the season.

McGill's 42 points was followed by Mary Henry's 20, Terry Hollingsworth's 12 and Michelle Dorsey's 14.

The Lady 'Cats, 6-2 overall, will play Southwest at home Thursday to close out the first semester action. Game time is 6 p.m. in the Marvin R. White Coliseum.

Rocks nip St. Martin in district thriller

Coach Chuck Genin went into his bag of magical tricks to pull out a win over St. Martin Monday evening in a varsity basketball game played in Biloxi at St. Martin.

The Rocks found themselves down 22-6 at the end of the first quarter, as St. Martin used its speed and quickness to fast break on the Rockchaws.

Despite some animated conversations between Coach Genin and his players the Rocks still found themselves down by 14 points at halftime.

"In the first half we played with a lack of emotion," understated Genin. Our offense was stagnant, and I had to get on them a little bit.

At halftime we had to make some important offensive and defensive adjustments, or else they were going to blow us out of the gym."

The third quarter found the Rockchaws coming back, as they closed the gap to within nine points. Some key rebounding by Brian Alexander and Shannon Garrett helped the Rocks gather momentum.

Midway through the fourth quarter, the Rocks had taken a one-point lead. A critical three-point basket by Yasin Shabazz aided the Rockchaw cause. The lead swayed back and fourth throughout the remainder of the game.

"Down the stretch we came up with big defensive plays, including steals and made baskets off those steals," said Genin. "There was a lot of pride and guts on the part of our players to come back."

"In a sense, what happened to us in the first quarter was good, because our team knows that we have the ability to come back when we're down," stated Genin.

Leading scorers for the Rockchaws were Brian Alexander with 15 points and 14 rebounds, followed by Shannon Garrett with 12 points and 10 rebounds. Yasin Shabazz added 11 points, including two three-point goals.

The Rocks are now 8-5, and resume action this week against Long Beach.

GCRL personnel participate in joint fisheries program

Gulf Coast Research Laboratory was represented Oct. 19-22 at the joint fall meeting of the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission and Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission in Key West, Fla.

GCRL staff members in attendance at the meeting included Dr. Thomas D. McIlwain, assistant director of fisheries research and development; Dr. Joanne Shultz, head of the ichthyoplankton section; Richard Waller, Mrs. Harriet Perry and John Cirino, all of the fisheries division; and Larry Nicholson, head of the anadromous fish section.

The Gulf and Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commissions are state compacts set up by the U.S. Congress and the principal objective of the commissions is the conservation, development, and full utilization of the fishery resources under their purview and to provide food, employment, income and recreation to the people of these United States.

The Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission is an organization of the five Gulf coastal states. The commission is organized into a number of working subcommittees which are under the review of the Technical Coordinating Committee (TCC), which oversees scientific matters.

These include the Southeast Area Monitoring and Assessment Subcommittee (SEAMAP), the Anadromous Fish Subcommittee, and Crab Subcommittee, the Recreational Fish Subcommittee and the Menhaden Advisory Subcommittee.

Dr. McIlwain serves as Mississippi's representative on the TCC, as well as chairman of the Red Drum Work Group under the SEAMAP Subcommittee, where he gave a report on all the red drum research currently underway in the Gulf.

Dr. Shultz serves as chairperson of the Ichthyoplankton Work Group under the SEAMAP Subcommittee. Dr. Shultz reported on the work group activities which were highlighted by the recent visit of two scientists from Poland.

Richard Waller is Mississippi's representative on the SEAMAP Subcommittee.

Larry Nicholson is chairman of the Anadromous Fish Subcommittee. He reported on that group's activities in completing a fishery management plan for striped bass in the Gulf.

The Mississippi representative on the Crab Subcommittee is Mrs. Harriet Perry. Mrs. Perry reported on the crab industry status in Mississippi and on her work in developing the deep sea crab resources in the northern Gulf area.

John Cirino, Fishery Management Section at GCRL, gave a presentation to the Recreational Fish Subcommittee on the development and condition of the artificial fishing reefs off Mississippi, which have been built and maintained by Gulf Fishing Banks, Inc.

J. Y. Christmas, assistant director for Fisheries Research and Development, emeritus, GCRL, retired, serves as chairman of the TCC and of the Menhaden Advisory Subcommittee.

Christmas is recognized for his pioneering research on menhaden in the northern Gulf of Mexico.

The next Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission meeting will be hosted by the state of Alabama at Perdido Key in the spring of 1988.

Helpful Advice from the American Academy of Pediatrics

YOUTH FITNESS: THE MYTHS AND THE FACTS

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) is calling for more physical education programs in schools—those that stress lifetime fitness activities—and greater family involvement in fitness at home. The AAP corrects some common myths about youth fitness:

MYTH: Children Are Fit.

FACT: In many ways, children are less fit and more flabby today than in the 60s. Studies show that up to 50 percent of children are not getting enough exercise to develop healthy hearts and lungs.

MYTH: If Children Exercise

Occasionally, That's Enough.

FACT: According to the AAP, the best all-around fitness activities should be done at least three times a week; continue without breaks for 20 to 25 minutes; increase the heart rate a significant amount, depending on the child's age.

MYTH: P.E. Is Unnecessary. Academics Is What Counts.

FACT: Healthy children learn better. Research continues to support the role of physical fitness in promoting physical health, improved work capacity and energy.

MYTH: Most Students Pass Standard School Fitness Tests.

FACT: Each year, 18 million school children take the Presidential Fitness Test—a series of exercises to measure strength, flexibility and endurance. Only two percent of students who took the "President's Challenge" in 1984 received the award.

MYTH: Muscles Mean Fitness.

FACT: The AAP defines fitness to include: muscle strength and endurance, flexibility, body fat composition and cardiorespiratory endurance.

Fall turnover

Although some Southerners believe that a fall "turnover" of a lake is only something that happens up North, all thermoclined lakes do "turn over." It just doesn't happen all at once and it may be so gradual it's unnoticed.

What fall turnover is all about is a shut-off period for fish activity on a particular lake. Cold surface water "settles" downward while deep warmer waters rise. Basically, this phenomenon reoxygenates the water.

"This turnover homogenizes lakes that have thermoclined in summer," state Bass: A Handbook of Strategies.

And we all know what homogenize means, like in milk!

"In a shallow water lake fall turnover can cause problems," states Guido Hibdon, Johnson Pro Staff member based in Missouri. "It's happening right now (mid-September) in the upper end of the lake in the shallows. And when that happens, you have a week of bad fishing unless you're on the lower end of the lake where the water is deeper (30-40 feet) and you're fishing for deeper bass."

Hibdon points out one tactic that may be applicable to reservoirs and impoundments with feeding rivers.

"I was just with some people and we were talking about fishing ahead of the turnover," Hibdon noted while emphasizing that the turnover slowly spreads through the body of water. "When it hits a dam or the end of a lake, which is far as it can go, you can go back and start fishing up-river where the turnover is completed. Then you can catch bass again."

According to Hibdon, you have to fish a given body of water a lot to be able to detect the tell-tale signs of the turnover. It's a slow process but you can detect it by the foamy substance or other matter that comes loose from the bottom. This can be seen by a knowledgeable eye and detected with a sensitive nose.

It should also be noted that not all lakes with a thermocline turnover at the same exact time. Knowledge of several lakes in your area can mean the difference between an uninterrupted week of fishing and four or five days of frustration.

Bubba and sissy bassin'

There are so many bassin' tournaments nowadays that it's hard to keep up on what's hot before it's the coldest bait on the circuit! At the end of July, I caught Ken Cook, Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff member, just after he reported home from the Pro Bass tournament in Las Vegas, Nev. And you know what's hot? Bubbas and sissies!

Now, I'm not talking about guys that stand 6-foot 6-inch in height and tip a room toward them when they walk in. And I'm not speaking about a short skinny fella that used to be a sandcatcher on the beach during his youth.

But, there is a connection of sorts here. Bubba tackle and lures (you got it, favored in the South) are what you use when you're going after big bass; sissy tackle and lures (believe it or not, introduced from the West Coast!) favor the lighter and smaller side.

"I see a lot of guys switching over to lighter tackle," states Cook with regard to the pro circuit. "I'm seeing a lot of what we're calling 'sissy' bait. What has been termed 'bubba'...

"Bubba" is a term referring to a big old bass in the south and East—you know, Buba, a big heavy guy with a name on the belt buckle that says 'BUBBA'—and we're using big spinner baits, Zara Spooks, big crank baits and stuff like that to fish for big bass primarily in the South and East.

"The 'sissy baits' for the most part have come from the West Coast, like a Gitsit and the little tiny worms and grubs. You're using six and eight pound test line, light spinning rods."

The latter category has become popular lately among tournament fishermen because fishing's tougher and more and more good fishermen are finding it harder to catch bass. So, they're going toward lighter line and smaller baits to enable them to catch their limits.

Fishing clubs and other groups can get free-loan films from Solona Studios, the film distribution office at Outboard Marine Corporation. For a free catalog of available films write: Solona Studios, Box 663, 4143 N. 27th St., Milwaukee, WI 53201.

Kick Returns

During my years in the National Football League I ran back kick-offs and punts as well as starting in the backfield for the Chicago Bears.

It's rare today to see a starting player running back kicks. The coaches may feel that a particular player might get injured while playing on special teams. Back then my coach just saw it as another opportunity for me to get my hands on the ball.

When the coach said, "I want you to run back kicks," you did it. The players felt differently about their jobs, and it was a job.

Today's players often tell the coach what they will and will not do. And frankly, many of them are afraid to run back kickoffs or punts.

I loved playing on the special teams. I wasn't worried about getting hit because I could see all the people in front of me. In running from scrimmage, you can get hit from the back or the side. On returns, they are coming straight at you.

The way I ran with a lot of moves, tacklers got an arm or a jersey or pushed me out of bounds; I was always doing things to keep opponents off balance. The collisions were not any more violent than a normal running play.

I'll admit there was one time in my rookie year when a Detroit player clothes-lined me, which was legal back then. I didn't fumble but I jumped up and started running to the wrong bench. My teammates had to catch me and turn me around.

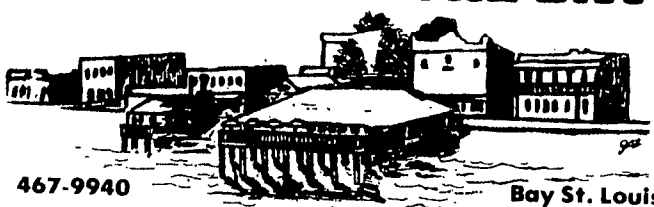

Watching football today, I have trouble understanding why kick-off and punt returns aren't more successful. The rules have been changed to make it a great deal easier for the return team. Kickoffs are from the 35 yard line instead of the 40. On punt returns, only two defenders can take off immediately at the snap of the ball. It used to be that all 11 defenders charged down the field at once. An old coach of mine in grade school used to tell me that a good back should beat one man 100 percent of the time and two defenders 75 percent of the time.

Teams might not be spending enough time on returns in practice. You have to be able to do it in practice if you expect to do it in the game. If they really worked on it, I think fans would see a lot more touchdowns scored on returns. II

Did you know an 8-year-old girl helped name the Super Bowl game? When football leaders were deciding what to call their championship game, Sharron Hunt, 8-year-old daughter of Lamar Hunt, who owns the Kansas City Chiefs, had been playing with a black rubber ball called a "super ball"—and from that she got the idea to suggest to her Dad that pro football could name its title game the "Super Bowl". Lamar Hunt made that recommendation, and so the famous Super Bowl game really owes its name to a little girl.

Here's a fantastic football fact. The Waco (Tex.) High School team of 1921 had such a great defense that they did not allow any team to get past their 35 yard line ALL SEASON! Can you imagine a tougher defense than that?

Did you know that there was once a football game called the "Confusion Bowl" by sports writers? It happened when Miami played Miami! That was Miami of Florida meeting Miami of Ohio. They played against each other in both 1945 and 1946.

USM 'Chart Your Course' event aimed at adults

HATTIESBURG—Individuals may plan coursework toward achieving a college degree in January with the help of the University of Southern Mississippi's Adult Studies Program.

A "Chart Your Course" event, to be held Jan. 7 from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m., is an optional program designed to give non-traditional students assistance in plotting their classroom schedules.

The program, sponsored by USM's Division of Lifelong Learning, will provide continuing education students with an opportunity to meet academic advisers, select courses and register for the upcoming spring semester that begins Jan. 13.

In response to a growing enrollment of adult students at USM, lifelong learning officials developed the Adult Studies Program to assist non-traditional students who are interested in pursuing a degree, but who cannot attend daytime classes.

The adult-oriented curriculum features 23 degree programs, professional development and special interest courses, offered on weekday nights and weekends.

For additional information or for an appointment, call 1-800-CALL USM or (601) 266-4512, or write Southern Station Box 5056, Hattiesburg, Miss. 39406-5056.

Bert shakes hands with children as Myrna Bourgeois, assistant principal, looks on.

Award sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

One particularly outstanding senior will eventually collect the $10,000 scholarship which goes to the Century III Leadership national winner. The person is selected at the Century III Leadership National Conference, March 18-21, 1988, at Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia. National semifinalists earn additional $500 awards.

Two students from each state and the District of Columbia—chosen from winners at each participating high school—receive $1,500 scholarships and all-expense-paid trips to the Williamsburg conference. Two alternates from each state receive $500 awards. Six finalists from each state receive $100 scholarship awards.

In all, the Century III Leaders program awards $249,100 in scholarships and provides for 102 students to attend the Williamsburg conference. This program is administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and funded by the Shell Companies Foundation, Inc.

CPSC Warns Parents About Child Accidents in Recliner Chairs

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) and the American Furniture Manufacturers Association (AFMA) are reissuing a national consumer alert about possible accidental death or injury to young children using or playing on recliner chairs. Since January 1980, the Commission has investigated or received reports of 3 deaths and 2 serious brain injuries to children involving recliner chairs. Of the approximately 90 million American households, an estimated 24 million households have over 40 million recliner chairs in them.

Information available to the CPSC about the accidents, although incomplete, leads CPSC to conclude that the victims:

- were between the ages of 12 months and 36 months;
- were unsupervised at the time of the accident;
- were apparently climbing or playing on the leg rest of the chair while the chair was in a reclined position; and
- were trapped when their heads entered the opening between the chair seat and the leg rest as their own body weight forced the leg rest down.

After receiving this information from CPSC, the recliner chair in-dusty established voluntary guidelines that called for improvements in new recliner chairs. These guidelines specify: 1) that a device(s) will be installed that will reduce the opening created between the leg rest and seat cushion when the chair is in the reclined position; and 2) that the following caution be attached to all recliner chairs:

CAUTION
DO NOT ALLOW CHILDREN TO PLAY ON THIS MECHANIZED FURNITURE OR OPERATE THE MECHANISM. LEG REST FOLDS DOWN ON CLOSING SO THAT A CHILD

COULD POSSIBLY BE INJURED. ALWAYS LEAVE IN AN UPRIGHT AND CLOSED POSITION AND KEEP HANDS AND FEET CLEAR OF MECHANISM. ONLY THE OCCUPANT SHOULD OPERATE IT.

Consumers who have the older design of recliner chairs in their homes are urged to use appropriate precautions in preventing young children from playing on these chairs. For consumers who are shopping for new recliner chairs, it is suggested they look for chairs that meet the voluntary industry guidelines.

USM archives good source of Cherokee Indian research

HATTIESBURG—Is there a Cherokee Indian in your family tree? If so, you may be able to find out more about him, or her with "a little luck" and the help of some archival materials at the University of Southern Mississippi.

"One of the more difficult lineages to trace is that of an Indian ancestor," said Dr. Betty Drake, genealogy librarian at the McCain Library and Archives at USM.

"Because of limited written records, the fact that whites and Cherokees living together were usually in the frontier areas, and because of the many (courthouse) fires and other destruction of records, these Indians remain elusive," she added.

Drake said a majority of known records of the Cherokees comes from historical accounts of Indian agents, missionaries, individual correspondence, census records and other materials.

"When they enrolled for land, the Indians were asked to put on record as much as they knew about their families...the amount of white and Indian blood," Drake said.

Since whites and Indians lived, farmed, hunted and intermingled on the margins of the great 18th century frontier of colonial America, Drake said a growing number of Southerners are becoming aware that there was a Cherokee Indian somewhere in their family history.

One of those Southerners includes Drake. Her great grandmother, Emaline Lewis—a full-blood Cherokee—was born in northern Georgia in 1828.

Although Drake has been able to trace her European heritage back through the 1700s in the United States to mid 13th century England, the existing records listing her Cherokee heritage end with Emaline's death in 1907.

According to Drake, the McCain library's extensive genealogy collection includes the following materials that may be helpful in researching Cherokee ancestry:

Emmett Starr's "History of the Cherokee Indians, Their Legends and Folk Lore." Starr includes the genealogies of many Cherokee families and is suggested as the first place to look for a Cherokee family. "The Cherokee Indians of the Mountains" by Sonia Bleeker—helpful reading for life among the Cherokees.

"Cherokee Roots" by Bob Blankenship, a compilation of the 1835 Henderson Roll, 1848 Mulloy Roll, 1851 Siler Roll, 1852 Chapman Roll, 1883 Hester Roll, 1908 Churchill Roll, and the 1924 Baker Roll. Enrollment procedures also are given.

"Cherokee Blood" by Shirley Hoskins—three volumes of this work, which consists of family charts based on applications to the U.S. Courts of Claims 1906-1909.

"Those Who Cried, The 16,000"—a listing of records of the Cherokees who were counted in 1835 before removal to the West.

"The Eastern Cherokees" by David Siler—the 1851 Siler Roll divided by two North Carolina counties, five Tennessee counties, three Alabama counties, nine Georgia counties and Washington, D.C.

"Cherokees" by Marion Israel—an easy-reading book, written primarily for children, but one that describes customs of the Cherokee.

For more information about the Cherokee materials, or for information about other genealogy archives at USM, contact Dr. Betty S. Drake, Southern Station Box 5148, Hattiesburg, Miss 39401.

TEEN TALK

Teens Need Adequate Sleep, Good Nutrition

By Dr. Ann F. Jarratt
4-H Youth Development Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

"Why do teens come to school and then sleep through all their classes?"

Sometimes people don't get enough sleep at night. Therefore, they are tired and sleepy the next day. Illness in the family or personal illness could be a cause. Working a late night shift with a job, or watching late movies or listening to the stereo most of the night also are causes of sleepiness. A study conducted at the Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson found that most teens 17 and 18 years old need at least 8 to 9 hours sleep per night.

Eating breakfast each morning also has an effect on your energy level at school. Your brain needs refueling each morning with some kind of nutritious food. You've often heard that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. Believe it.

Sleep can be an escape mechanism. If someone comes to school unprepared for class, he or she may cop out of class participation by sleeping. The excuse for not doing well on a test may be, "I didn't hear that discussed. I fell asleep!"

The important thing to remember is that if you have goals for your life and want to succeed, you'll have to be awake and learning and alert to opportunities.

"Why do teenagers quit school?"

Some have had bad experiences in school. They have told themselves so often that they cannot succeed in school that they believe it. They have lost hope as a student.

Some decide they don't fit in at school. School causes them too much personal pain.

Others are bored or impatient with school and want to rush out into the adult world and not be bound with school rules and regulations. Some leave school to make "big bucks." Some are required to leave because they are pregnant.

Whatever the reasons, in almost every case, quitting school before graduation is a critical mistake. In today's work world a diploma is necessary for entry into almost any field with a future.

"Why does school have to be a test to see if we make the right decisions day to day?"

School is like life in general. The decisions you make every day affect your life the next day and, sometimes on into the future. If you make good decisions, generally positive things happen. When you make decisions without considering the facts and the outcomes, you will often be disappointed. The important thing to remember about poor decisions is that you must learn from the experience and don't repeat it.

"Is it true that most high school teenagers drop out of school because of lack of concern by their family?"

Family members play a major role in the lives of young people whether they realize it or not. They make a positive or a negative difference depending on their attitude and actions toward their teen.

You can find examples of teens who have been successful in school subjects and extracurricular activities without any family interest or support. They just had to draw more heavily on their inner personal motivation. Others who had no home support may have done enough just to get by or may have given up.

The real key, in my opinion, is for the teen to set personal goals and be willing to work to make them happen. If you have a supportive family, be very grateful and regularly show your family your appreciation. If you don't have one, recognize that you can make good things happen for yourself. As long as you make an honest effort, there will be people who will be willing to help.

Chomsky says U.S. sees itself as lawless, violent nation

THE SEA COAST ECHO—THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1987-3C

The United States sees itself as a lawless and violent nation that often achieves national goals through unlawful and violent actions, an internationally known political observer has told a student forum at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Dr. Noam Chomsky—cultural linguist, author, political analyst and a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) for more than 30 years—maintained that brand of U.S. policy particularly is evident in the Persian Gulf and in Central America.

Chomsky, on the USM campus in November for a number of lectures and seminars, presented his opinions during a University Forum address sponsored by the USM Honors College.

"To the liberal and conservative elites—the whole spectrum of our society—the self-image is that the U.S. is a lawless and violent state, which is not governed by the rule of law and is free to use any form of terror and aggression that is chosen in pursuit of its aims," Chomsky said of the nation's collective attitude.

He cited the revelations of arms deals with the "terrorist state" of Iran while that country held U.S. and other hostages, and using the profits gained from weapons sales to that oil-rich nation to fund an "army of proxy" in Nicaragua as examples of a continuation of international wrongdoings.

Chomsky said the U.S. has engaged in illegal activities in Iran and Nicaragua since Mohammed Riza Pahlavi was established as shah of the Persian Gulf nation in 1941 and General Anastasio Somoza gained power in Central America as dictator of Nicaragua in 1956.

"Until 1979, Iran and Nicaragua were ruled by murderous and brutal tyrants who were put into power by the U.S.," Chomsky contended. "In 1979, both of these murderers were overthrown by popular revolutions."

But while the two men were in power, Chomsky said agents of the U.S. and Israeli governments assisted the Iranian secret police in schemes to detain and torture Iranian citizens who opposed the Shah. He also maintained the U.S. launched several covert and illegal operations aimed at Central American and Caribbean targets from Nicaraguan bases.

"When the U.S. intervened to overthrow the capitalist democratic government of Guatemala in 1954, they (the U.S.) used Nicaragua as a base," Chomsky said. "They turned the country into a 'hell on earth' that most resembles Nazi Germany in this modern world."

Chomsky also said the U.S. has used Nicaragua as a base in other power struggles in the region, including: as a base of operations for the early 1960s Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba; and sending large numbers of troops to Nicaragua to influence the 1955 elections in the Dominican Republic, and the 1972 elections in El Salvador.

Chomsky said when reports of wrongdoings finally become public, the government and even the "liberal" press often affect "damage control operations" to minimize a situation.

"The lessons are there," he concluded. "The question is whether we will heed them."
